

NIMHD Grant # U54 MD004811-09

500 Years of Resiliency: Courageous Conversations on Racial Healing, Justice and Equity Policy

Friday, September 11, 2020
6:30 PM- 8:30 PM (MTN)

PRESENTERS

Nadine Tafoya, MSW, LCSW

Nadine is a member of the Mescalero Apache tribe, a wife, mother and Grandmother. She lives in a rural Pueblo village in Northern NM with her husband and family. She was raised in NM, with a Grandfather, and father, a Servant Leader of the Apaches. She is the founder of Nadine Tafoya & Associates, (NTA), an independent consulting firm, specializing in Behavior Health prevention and treatment, youth and community development initiatives, decolonization, creative conflict management, and intercultural peace building.

Reverend Dr. Wanda Cody Padilla, M.Ed, DPA

Dr. Cody-Ross Padilla is an African American female Elder, mother and grandmother. She is currently researching and writing her fourth book on understanding and offering a "reconciliation-type" solution to the "color-line" problem on our Planet today. She is a certified intercultural and diversity trainer and facilitator.

Roberto Chené, MA, BA

Roberto is Director of the Center for Intercultural Leadership Training and Conflict Resolution in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He is deeply rooted in the Chicano-Latino community and has taught "Cross-Cultural Education" and "Latinos and Public Policy" at the University of New Mexico.

Lucy Moore

Lucy is a facilitator, mediator, trainer and consultant, specializing in complex, often confounding, multi-party, multi-issue conflicts. She is based in Santa Fe, New Mexico, and for the past 35 years has worked regionally and nationally on issues that include water rights, endangered species, cultural preservation, tribal sovereignty, forest use, and more.

FACILITATOR

Kiran Katira, PhD

Dr. Katira is a Co-Investigator with the TREE Center's Community Engagement and Dissemination Core and the Director with UNM Community Engagement Center. She is a Fellow with NACA Inspired Schools Network and has over twenty years' experience working on anti-racist initiatives and with youth leaders in NM.

HOST

Lisa Cacari Stone, PhD, Director/PI, TREE Center

Lisa Cacari Stone has dedicated over 30 years of leadership in public health aimed at advancing health equity for diverse racial, under-resourced, rural and Latinx and immigrant populations. She brings "real-life" experience to understanding the structural determinants of health and policy making. She is Associate Professor with the College of Population Health at UNM.

Zoom Information Below

<https://hsc-unm.zoom.us/j/93475282193>

Passcode: 138081

Website: <http://hsc.unm.edu/tree>

